July 22. 1867.

Many thanks to you, dear Mr Garrison, for sending me the paper from Glasgow. Mr Nichol has kindly forwarded me the report of your Edinburgh reception, & Eliza Wigham & Rebecca Moore have informed me of the Newcastle & Manchester proceedings, thus rendering me a silent sharer in these joyous meetings. I do indeed "give thanks continually" at all these manifestations of sympathy & esteem, they will do the offerers good, & I trust you will escape being quite worn out by this final sacrifice for the Cause."

From Mr Webb I hear that you expect to be in London for a day or two at the end of the week before crossing to France, and as I am improving in health I feel very anxious to greet you there if practicable. But possibly you have engagements for every hour of your stay in Town, and could not spare any for me were I to meet you?

Would Mr Villard or your son be kind enough to send me one line to say whether you will have any free hours before you go back to Paris, or whether it will be more considerate to you, as it may be <sup>more</sup> prudent for myself - to wait till you return to England for the pleasure of seeing you?

Any way & always I am with you in loving sympathy & grateful regard.

Rebecca Moore sends her love to you all, she is leaving me on Wednesday. We have talked much of you & longed to have you here.

Ever yours Mary A. Lettis.

Will you give my regards to the friends you are with at Glasgow & the Patrons & Sineals.'
